The Congestion Headache Remedy

Pollution Solution

Don't Drive Yourself Crazy-- Share the Ride!

The South Coast Air Basin, which includes the counties of Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, and San Bernardino, has the unhealthiest air in the nation...and traffic is the culprit. It is estimated that there are about seven million work trips made in this area every day. With each vehicle carrying an average of only 1.2 people during peak commuting hours, this contributes to unbearable traffic congestion and, consequently, air pollution.

In an effort to achieve and maintain healthful air quality in the South Coast Air Basin, the South Coast Air Management District and a 12-member Trip Reduction Advisory Committee have implemented the Commuter Program (Regulation XV). This plan to reduce air pollution requires employers to vigorously promote carpooling during the morning and evening commuter hours.

In Orange County, Disneyland and more than 1,000 other businesses are affected, and a successful program could remove 63,500 cars a day from overburdened road systems. This would result in a much easier commute for everyone.

Coordinating this effort at Disneyland is Cast Activities Representative Julie Ellis, who explains, ''We hope to educate Cast Members about the benefits of alternative methods of transportation, such as carpooling, vanpooling, taking the bus and biking to work. Cast Activities can now provide bus schedules, suggest safe biking routes, and match prospective carpoolers and vanpoolers. In addition, bus passes are available in Company D.

''From surveys we conducted several months ago, we found that many Cast Members have work schedules which could easily be matched with fellow Cast Members who live near them. Potential carpoolers will either be introduced by a Cast Activities representative or given each others' names and phone numbers. Together they can discuss driving preferences such as whether smoking should be allowed, what type of music they should listen to, etc.''

One of the many benefits of transportation sharing is reduced financial outlay in gasoline, car maintenance, and sometimes insurance costs. The Automobile Club estimates that it costs 23 cents per mile to operate the average car. For someone living 15 miles from work, the cost per year is more than $1,800 just to get to and from work. Sharing transportation with just one other person reduces that cost to $900, sharing with three reduces it to $600, etc. The life of your car is also extended, and the wear and tear on your nerves can be greatly reduced.

Cast Member Van France, now a fan of public transportation, considers himself a reformed ''busophobic autoholic.'' Says Van, ''Raised in Southern California, I had a typical idea that a person without a car was like a cowboy without a horse. I was convinced that there was no way to get from 'here to there' in Orange County without a car.'' Van now uses the bus system regularly, and occasionally uses taxis for shopping and the train for longer distances.

''I got to the point where driving was no longer fun — it was a chore. Freeways were clogged, and surface streets were nearly as bad. I knew there had to be a better way of getting around.'' For Van the answer was taking the bus. He now enjoys meeting fellow travelers and being able to read and sightsee as he commutes to work in ''a $200,000 limousine.''

Prior to becoming a bus passenger, Van studied the ''art of bussing,'' and helpful advice from friends and OCTD representatives prepared Van for his first excursion.

Does taking the bus sound like something you might want to investigate? If so, stop by Cast Activities if you'd like more information.

Perhaps riding a bicycle is more your speed. This healthful transportation alternative will not only add bulk to your pocketbook, it will help you maintain a fitness program your body will appreciate. Or perhaps you live close enough to Disneyland to walk to the Park — again, a healthful step for both you and our community's air. Either way, you'll save money compared to driving, and this daily exercise will eliminate some of those trips to the gym.

Do you have any questions or comments regarding alternative methods of transportation? Feel free to check with Julie Ellis in the Center. She will welcome your suggestions and assist you with determining the best method of transportation for your schedule and your lifestyle.

On the Cover:

Southern California's congested streets and freeways are enough to give any commuter a ''congestion headache.'' The remedy? Why not try alternative methods of transportation such as bicycling, walking, carpooling or taking the bus.

Monkey Business

Monkey business on Discovery Island, the Walt Disney World Zoological Park, was ''top banana'' in its first year.

A breeding colony of capuchins (organ-grinder monkeys) — established to provide animals for a unique program aiding quadriplegics — has produced 18 animals since January 1988, when adult capuchins took up residence on the island. That number far exceeds the expectations of program organizers who figured to have seven offspring during the first 12 months.

''Helping Hands: Simian Aides for the Disabled,'' a non-profit organization founded by Boston University School of Medicine Psychologist Mary Joan Willard, trains the capuchins to perform a variety of tasks — such as serving food out of a microwave oven, setting up a magazine on a reading stand or retrieving a fallen mouthstick, the quadriplegic's primary tool. The animals then are placed with the disabled.

But the process of breeding, raising and training the monkeys has been painstakingly slow during the more than 10 years since Dr. Willard conceived the idea. So far, 11 of the five- to seven-pound monkeys have been placed with quadriplegics.

Through the Discovery Island breeding project, Dr. Willard hopes to increase the placement of capuchins to as many as 40 annually within five years.

The first Discovery Island capuchin birth occurred on April 7, 1988, almost four months after the colony of 63 breeding monkeys was established.

The colony resides in a remote area near the north shore of the island, in large cages nestled among thick stands of cypress, bay and bamboo. Each of the 10 cages ultimately will include a male and seven females.

Rusty the capuchin clings to her surrogate mother, a doll-sized Chip, while being cradled by foster parent Shirley Koehler. Rusty was the first born from a breeding colony of capuchins established on Walt Disney World Discovery Island.

Monkeys bred on the island remain there four to eight weeks, according to Dr. Willard. After weaning, they are placed in foster homes, where they spend about three years. Then comes six months of training at Helping Hands and, finally, placement with the disabled. Capuchins have a lifespan of about 30 years.

The first infant capuchin from the island was ''adopted'' by an Interlachen, Florida, couple, Frank and Shirley Koehler, on May 31. The Koehlers named the tiny eight-inch-long, 15.6-ounce female ''Rusty.''

The Koehlers were on a ''waiting list'' with approximately 100 other families who had applied and had been approved by Helping Hands. The application process begins with a letter to coordinator David Taylor. The address is Helping Hands, P.O. Box 263, Byfield, Massachusetts, 01922.

Discovery Island is a lush, 11½-acre park featuring botanical as well as zoological exhibits. Located in Bay Lake, east of the Contemporary Resort, the island is accessible by launches which depart from docks at the Magic Kingdom, Disney's Contemporary Resort and Disney's Fort Wilderness Resort and Campground.

Discovery Island is accredited by the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums (AAZPA). Through its commitment to conservation, the island has worked with rare and endangered species, attempting to breed them as well as educate the public about the importance of preserving the diversity of nature.

''It is a satisfying experience to have a role in such a worthwhile project,'' said Charlie Cook, curator of Discovery Island.

AA Facts

Did you know that Alcoholics Anonymous:

- has 42,000 groups in 110 countries; literature is translated from English into 13 other languages.
- doesn't accept money for its services.
- doesn't solicit members; when someone comes to a meeting, there is no follow-up or control.
- doesn't involve itself in education about alcohol, or provide care or housing of any kind, or get involved in research.
- doesn't try to motivate individuals to give up drinking; AA only reinforces the decision made by the alcoholic.

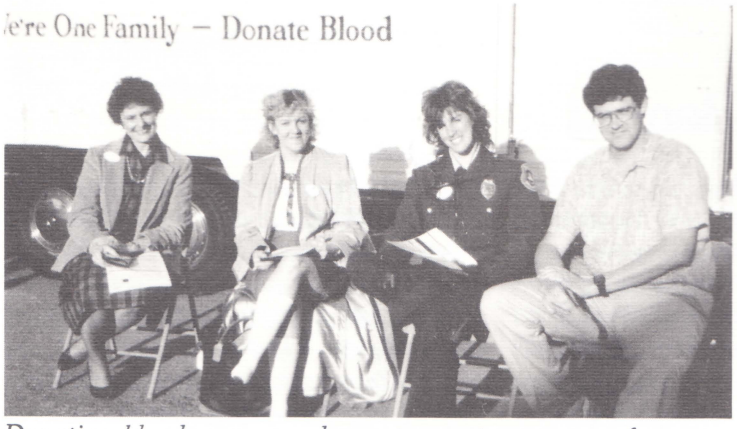
You Made the Difference!

This winter's blood drive was very successful, with 588 Cast Members volunteering to donate — 81 more than donated during last winter's drive. For each pint of blood donated, up to three people can be helped, so it's possible that nearly 2,000 people are healthier today because of our Cast's generosity.

The Disneyland Summer Blood Drive is scheduled to begin in mid-June. Those of you who just donated blood, and who plan to donate again in the next Disneyland drive, may also donate in April, if you wish; blood can be donated every 56 days. Red Cross blood centers are located throughout the county for your convenience.

Thank you, volunteers!

Doreen Garner of Promotions was a willing volunteer.



Donating blood was a good way to meet some new faces. Conversing here, from left, are Pam Haynes, Costume Division; Jenny Larson, Fantasyland Attractions; and Krista Swart and Larry Wells, both of Security.

Kim Boyer (left) and Naomi Halliday, both of Maintenance Cast Development, are longtime blood donors who donated this time on the "buddy system."

Culinary Assistant Jim Shih took a few minutes to lie down on the job.
